Looking at the angelica and legal blind spot of patriotic Chinese from Asia - Temple of Literature - World Blog - World Reader Network (computer version)

Liu Zhenya, a girl from mainland Hunan, married in Taiwan and had three children. In recent years, her TikTok, YouTube and other videos of "Yaya in Taiwan" have become popular on both sides of the Strait, and the viewing traffic has increased greatly. She has turned from a housewife to a big Internet celebrity. Ya Ya not only used her daughter to promote "patriotism" and "angalgui", but also exposed the pictures of herself receiving special preferential treatment from the mainland, such as being treated by the deputy mayor of Harbin. For a Xiang (township) girl, this is simply a leap into the dragon gate, and it feels like a long face. Her madness and self-confidence became more and more uncontrollable, and her educative or reprimanding voice aroused the disgust of many people. Due to the propaganda of "unification of Taiwan by force", the tone completely imitated the illogical tone of the foreign propaganda, coupled with constant threats and intimidation, she was denounced by the Taiwanese people and interviewed and investigated by the government.

Taiwan's folk customs are relatively tolerant and moderate, and this time the people's anger was pushed to the forefront by Yaya. According to media reports, Yaya was revited for "blatantly advocating the unification of Taiwan" and involved "endangering national security and social stability". In violation of the "Measures for Long-term Residence or Settlement Permit for People in the Mainland of the Mainland", the residence permit in Taiwan was revaled, and the control was not allowed to apply for dependent residence again within 5 years, and must be Leave the country within 10 days of receiving the deadline (by March 25), otherwise you will be forced to leave the country. Obviously, the Republic of China and her motherland have no to do with each other, and the Taiwanese who were used to being bullied suddenly became hard.

Ya Ya was obviously confused. In the face of the media's siege, she used a lot of tricks to relieve herself in a panic. Defending "democracy in the whole process", defending the right of "freedom", and working hard for Wu Tong's own in-laws... Because they are all illogical and common sense of propaganda, they have become jokes in the Chinese media and have been ridiculed and despised by the people on both sides of the Straits.

Lai Qingde recently made it clear that the other side is an "overseas hostile force". Beijing must be very annoyed with Lai's "stealing" proprietary term, but it is helpless. Obviously, the pressure of the new U.S. government has forced all allies to become tough. Therefore, according to the principle of reciprocity, Jianbi Kiyono has become the consensus on the island under the command of the president, and the little girl Yaya became the first patriotic bird to be beaten down.

The forced expulsion of Taiwan Pink has also received wide international attention. For example, the British BBC, AIT (American Association in Taiwan), etc. have clearly expressed their support for President Lai Qingde's latest position on the Communist Party. Netizens from all over the world, such as Japan and Canada, have called on their governments to take a tough stance to drive away the pink people who stand for the Communist Party of China's cognitive war and publicity. The Taiwanese media is also in favor of reactivating the abandoned military judicial system and comprehensively hanging the spy propaganda network on the other side. The interaction between Taiwan, the United States and other countries is obviously still in the force. The people of Taiwan spontaneously set off an anti-communist climax and demanded that the artists and politicians who lick the communists be punished.

The evil theory and proliferation of communism, terrorism, etc. are actually the direct result of the long-term appeasement or secret encouragement policies of the Western left. Although some people who grew up under the Iron Curtain have left their original place of residence, because they have been brainwashed for a long time, they may not have much culture of empathy and gratitude. They do not understand that freedom is to respect the freedom of others first, and they do not know the difference between rights and privileges, the difference between green cards and citizens and other basic common sense, coupled with a strong utilitarian mentality. The director's outlook on life is easy to do extraordinary things, but he is proud of himself.

These people are not stupid, they are just pretending to be stupid. On the other hand, if Asia returns to the mainland to shout the slogan of counterattacking the mainland, the iron fist will never be just to ask for such a simple civilized treatment, and it is not impossible to sit through the bottom of the prison.

In fact, the scene of Taiwan has been continuously staged for many years in many countries such as Europe, the United States, Japan, South Korea and so on.

Recently, the New York Times reported that the Trump administration is taking action to expel a permanent legal resident of the United States, Mahmud Khalil. He participated in leading the campus protests that attracted widespread attention against Israel's war in Gaza. At the age of 30, he received a master's degree from the School of International and Public Affairs of Columbia University in December last year. He is of Palestinian descent, and his wife is an American citizen. He is currently eight months pregnant.

"In a speech to reporters in Ireland, Secretary of State Rubio claimed that Khalil's protest was anti-Semitic and pro-Terrorist activities in support of the terrorist organization Hamas. He said that foreigners who come to the United States to do such things will have their visas or green cards revoked and deported. It has nothing to do with freedom of speech," Rubio said. This is about those who don't have the right to be in the United States. No one is born with the right to get a student visa. By the way, no one is born to get a green card.

Trump announced at a rally in Iowa, "Americans are disgusted to see a large number of foreigners on college campuses openly supporting terrorists. They are teaching your children to hate. He also said, "We will revoke the student visas of radical, anti-American and anti-Semitic foreigners in our colleges and universities, and we will deport them directly to China." On October 28 of the same year, in his speech in Las Vegas, he also said, "We will terminate the visas of all Hamas sympathizers, and we will drive them out of our university campus, out of our city, and out of our country."

It is reported that a Chinese female student disguised as a Middle Eastern student was also expelled for participating in terrorist activities. Wu Xiaolei, another 25-year-old Chinese student who studied at the Berkeley Conservatory of Music in 2022, threatened and harassed Chinese students who posted posters to promote democracy and solidarity with the white paper movement. Wu was later sentenced to nine months in prison by the U.S. court and was subsequently expelled.

I find that many people, including the above-mentioned Asian and international students, do not know much about the constitutional system of Western countries, the common law (case law) system, the rights and obligations of citizens, etc. or are relatively superficial. Coupled with the misleading propaganda of the simple Chinese media (perhaps they really only know the skin), many people are confused or afraid. State. For example, they believe that they have a strong motherland to support them, and they can do whatever they want overseas. If something happens, the wolf can take him home as a hero; some people think that the green card is a permanent guarantee and can be eaten by both ends; if he can't come out, he thinks that citizens can also be detained or expelled at will, especially taking the example of the detention of the Japanese at that time as evidence, intimidating the Chinese in the United States to stand on the propaganda platform for the United Front and leave them A back road.

The United States is the dominant country in the Western world. Its national strategy, political and judicial evolution affect almost all countries. Taking the United States as an example, this article briefly sorts out the supplement, correction and improvement of civil rights and obligations by the executive, congress and legislative organs after World War II for readers' reference. Many "patriotic" Asians in Europe, the United States and Japan should promote the construction of democracy and the rule of law in their own countries to adapt to the trend of the times and the ideals of patriotism. This is the best angelica and unification.

Overseas, guests should know the law and respect the history and culture of the country where they live, so as not to be driven back and ridiculed by their compatriots. The immigrant country welcomes you to visit or settle down. If you are willing to take root overseas, this is a favor or privilege from the country. Even if you don't want to be grateful, you should not go outside to get a short-term psychopathic balance because you are used to fear inside. For those who love their motherland so much that they can't give up, the best love is "angica". The following is an American story. He suffered humiliation and suffering, but he contributed to the change of the country by himself. Now almost no one denies that he is a true patriot.

The past must start from the Second World War more than 80 years ago.

After Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor, "On February 19, 1942, U.S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed Executive Order No. 9066, authorizing the U.S. Department of War to demarcate specific areas of the country as "war zones" and take all necessary restrictive measures against residents living in these war zones, including Expel from the war zone. The order stipulates that all Japanese Americans in the West Coast states of the United States, including California, Oregon, Washington and Arizona, may face forced transfer. Japanese Americans across the United States are treated to varying degrees of severity: almost all Japanese Americans are imprisoned on the west coast of the United States; while in Hawaii, where the Japanese population accounts for nearly a third, only about 1,200 to 1,800 people are detained. Of all imprisoned Japanese Americans, 62% are American citizens. Until the end of World War II".

Using the revised Foreign Enemy Act, President Franklin Roosevelt issued a number of presidential announcements to arrest, detain, restrict and deport non-citizens of Japanese, German and Italian descent. Roosevelt invoked other wartime powers unrelated to the law and issued Executive Order No. 9066, sending Japanese Americans to concentration camps.

Among these people, Fred Toyosaburo Korematsu (Japanese: 是松 豊さaburo/これまつ とよさぶろう; Fred Toyosaburo Korematsu, January 30, 1919 - March 30, 2005) was a Japanese who lived on the west coast during World War II. Americans. He was denied service work by the navy because of a stomach ulcer. He thinks the reason for his refusal is because of his Japanese background. After that, he lost his job in the shipyard because of a small thing. After several twists and turns, because he is of Japanese descent, he completely lost his job opportunity.

In order to avoid imprisonment, he underwent plastic surgery on the outside of his eyes, falsely calling him a descendant of Hispanic/Hawaiian, and changed his name to Clyde Sarah. But his efforts did not succeed. The 23-year-old Matsuyo Saburo refused to obey Executive Order No. 9066 signed by Roosevelt. He believed that the order violated the Fifth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and violated the legitimate rights and interests of citizens. After he escaped from San Francisco, he was arrested and convicted in San Lian. It was sent to the resettlement center for imprisonment.

Song was convicted by the federal court on September 8, 1942, and then sent back to the Tanforan Assembly Center for imprisonment. For violating the order, he was reprimanded by the authorities in public and isolated by many Japanese people and regarded as troublemakers, and suffered mental and physical torture. He works 8 hours a day and is paid only $12 a month. He was placed in a stach with a simple light bulb. He recalled: "The prison is better than here".

Si Song found that the president's executive order was unconstitutional and filed a lawsuit with the court. He believes that migrants should have a fair trial in advance and defend their loyalty in court in a democratic way. On March 27, 1943, the Federal Court of Appeal upheld the decision of losing the lawsuit, giving it the final chance to turn to the Supreme Court for final judgment. On December 18, 1944, the Supreme Court ruled that the presidential executive order was unconstitutional by a ratio of 6:3. And it is determined that the president's compulsory resettlement measures are legal in times of emergency or criticality.

This case is the famous "Korematsu v. United States Case" (Korematsu v. United States, 323 U.S. 214 (1944) became one of the most controversial and widely criticized cases in the modern history of the United States.

With the end of World War II and the rise of the American civil rights movement, American society has undergone earth-shaking changes.

From the private sector, from Congress to professional groups, they have reflected on and demanded that the mistakes of the "Song v. United States Case" have been corrected. In 1976, President Ford signed a voice, officially terminating Presidential Executive Order No. 9066, and apologizing for the wrong forced relocation, recognizing that Japanese Americans were loyal and affirming their sacrifices and dedication to the country. In 1980, President Carter appointed a special committee to investigate the concentration of Japanese migration, which was identified as a failure of racial prejudice, hysteria and political leadership. In 1988, Congress passed the Civil Liberties Act, which was signed into law by President Reagan. And compensate each survivor with $20,000.

In 1998, President Clinton awarded Mr. Seisong the highest honor of citizenship, the Presidential Medal of Freedom, in recognition of his contribution to the United States, and put "him juxtaby with other great names". It was Saburo Matsuto who won countless honors and praises. The following are three examples: California celebrated Saburo Matsuto in 2011 as its anniversary; Virginia followed in 2015. In addition, since 2009, the University of California Law School has been established as a research memorial institution for Matsuyo Saburo: Fred T. Korematsu Institute.

In view of the authority of U.S. law and the special characteristics of case precedent operation, the Case of the United States of the United States is still a cited case, which has not been re-examined and corrected by the Supreme Court for a long time.

74 years later, due to the emergence of "similar" cases, the wrong decision of the "Sisong v. United States Case" was completely overturned, and the Supreme Court turned around.

In 2018, in the first week of Trump's in office, he "issued his first travel restriction order, imposing entry restrictions on seven countries, including Iran, Iraq, Libya, Somalia, Sudan, Syria and Yemen, which caused the dissatisfaction of some Americans and caused chaos in the airport". The presidential decree caused legal proceedings, and the final trial went to the Supreme Court (Trump v. Hawaii, No. 17-965,585 U.S. 667 (2018)).

The Federal Supreme Court ruled that Trump's travel restrictions for foreigners are not unconstitutional and are the president's power. According to the New York Times, the Supreme Court held that the opposition failed to prove that the restriction violated the U.S. Immigration Act or the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which prohibits the government from establishing a religion or prohibiting freedom of religious belief. Chief Justice John Roberts (John G. Roberts Jr.) He said, "This announcement is completely within the authority of the president."

It is gratifying that the case quotes the 74-year-old "Song v. United States Case".

Chief Justice Roberts wrote in the judgment: "(The 1944 loose case) forcibly relocated U.S. citizens to concentration camps, which is completely clearly based on race and objectively unconstitutional (according to the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution - the rights of citizens), it does not belong to the scope of presidential power. surround." "But overturning this morally repusive order does not mean that we need to deny the privilege of some presidents' ostensibly neutral policies used to restrict foreigners." (Chief Justice John Roberts writing: "The forcible relocation of U.S. citizens to concentration cam ps, solely and explicitly on the basis of race, is objectively unlawful and outside the scope of Pre sidential authority.")

So far, the U.S. administration, Congress and judiciary have given complete answers to citizens' rights in accordance with the Constitution. However, the president has the right to exercise legal powers over foreigners, including green card holders, such as restricting or depriving them of their right to entry or stay. One of the important laws is the Aliens and Incitement to Rebellion Law. This is a set of four American laws. The Incitement to Rebellion Act of 1798 criminally criminalises the dissemination of false and malicious attacks on the federal government. The Foreign Friends Act and the Incitement to Rebellion Act expired after a period of time. The Naturized Nationality Act was repealed in 1802, while the revised Alien Enemies Act is still in force and is currently contained in Chapter 3 of Title 50 of the United States Code.

Back to the topic of this article. Has a person who has been naturalized as a citizen entered the safe and can eat on both sides or multilaterally in the name of patriotism? The United States has a variety of mature laws to deal with all kinds of people who follow the side. As stipulated by the Immigration Law, people who have participated in terrorist, totalitarian or communist organizations are not allowed to enter or naturalize unless they are pardoned. However, if it is exposed, or continues to be secretly effective for the organization and does not declare as a foreign agent, it will also be deregistered and expelled. The only difference is that the court has a chance to defend, just through a set of cumbersome procedures. Those who promote the ideal of armed unification, terrorism or emancipation of all mankind had better return to your motherland and continue to dream of your big head.
